The destruction by fire of La Granja, the principal country seat of the Court of Spain, is a serious and vexatious loss to the King and Queen. La Granja was a delightful summer residence, being situated among the mountains, 2,840 feet above the sea, and surrounded by pine forests and beautiful scenery. The Louis XIV. palace, built by Philip V. between 1719 and 1746 at a cost of about £3,000,000, was large and handsome, with cheerful rooms, very comfortably furnished. The best of the pictures and statuary were removed some years ago to Madrid. The gardens, which are among the finest in Europe, are famous for their cascades and fountains, which rival those of Versailles. It was the custom of the Court to stay at Aranjuez on leaving Madrid early in May, and to proceed about the middle of June to La Granja until the end of August.

Un de nos abonnés nous annonce que le chapitre de Saragosse se propose de mettre en vente les célèbres et magnifiques tapisseries de Notre-Dame del Pilar, dites de La Seo, au nombre de vingt-deux, dont quatre du XIIe siècle. La plupart des journaux espagnols, doutant qu'un amateur espagnol se trouve pour acquérir ces merveilles, demandent au gouvernement de prendre les mesures nécessaires pour empêcher qu'elles ne passent à l'étranger, comme les joyaux provenant du même trésor, qui, aujourd'hui, sont au musée du South Kensington, à Londres.
